Introduction

If you have a project that could make a difference in your community, you may be eligible to receive funding for it from the Cree Nation Government Department of Justice and Correctional Services (DOJCS).

As crime prevention, offender rehabilitation and youth engagement are essential to the long-term safety and welfare of our communities, the DOJCS is pleased to launch four funds to help community members implement initiatives that facilitate and improve the administration of justice for the Crees across Eeyou Istchee:

Crime Prevention Fund

Youth Engagement Fund

Corrections Fund

Land Based Camps Fund

Four Funds

CORRECTIONS FUND

Support rehabilitation and reintegration of Cree offenders

Projects should help Cree offenders (both during detention and after release):

- learn and apply the skills and strategies they need to keep them from a cycle of reoffending.
- overcome barriers to successful reintegration.
- develop awareness of the consequences of their behaviour.
- develop a sense of responsibility.

Projects should target Crees who are subject to:

- social reinsertion.
- a conditional sentence order.
- a suspended sentence or parole.

- Cree bands and related entities
- Cree controlled organizations
- Cree beneficiaries
- Partnerships between Cree controlled organizations and other organizations (Cree partners must have > 50% control of project)
- Community Justice Committees

- Partnerships with local and regional stakeholders are encouraged.
- Representation from all Cree communities is encouraged, taking into account the size and needs of each.

LAND BASED CAMPS FUND

Build land based camps for us to support justice-related activities and rehabilitation of Cree offenders

Land based camps should:

- be used for the delivery of programs and activities that support the prevention of crime and the community reintegration and rehabilitation of Cree offenders.
- create an environment of trust where the needs of Cree offenders are addressed while providing them with an opportunity to re-connect with the Cree traditions and with the land.

Camps may also provide crime prevention programs specifically for youth.

Funding in the amount of $300,000 (maximum) is awarded for one land based camp per community.

The DOJCS will have priority over camp usage to deliver programs and services for Cree clientele on a regular basis.

- Cree bands and related entities
- Cree controlled organizations
- Cree beneficiaries

All projects must be supported by the community(ies), as evidenced by relevant Band Council Resolution(s), while promoting and preserving the Cree culture, values and traditions.

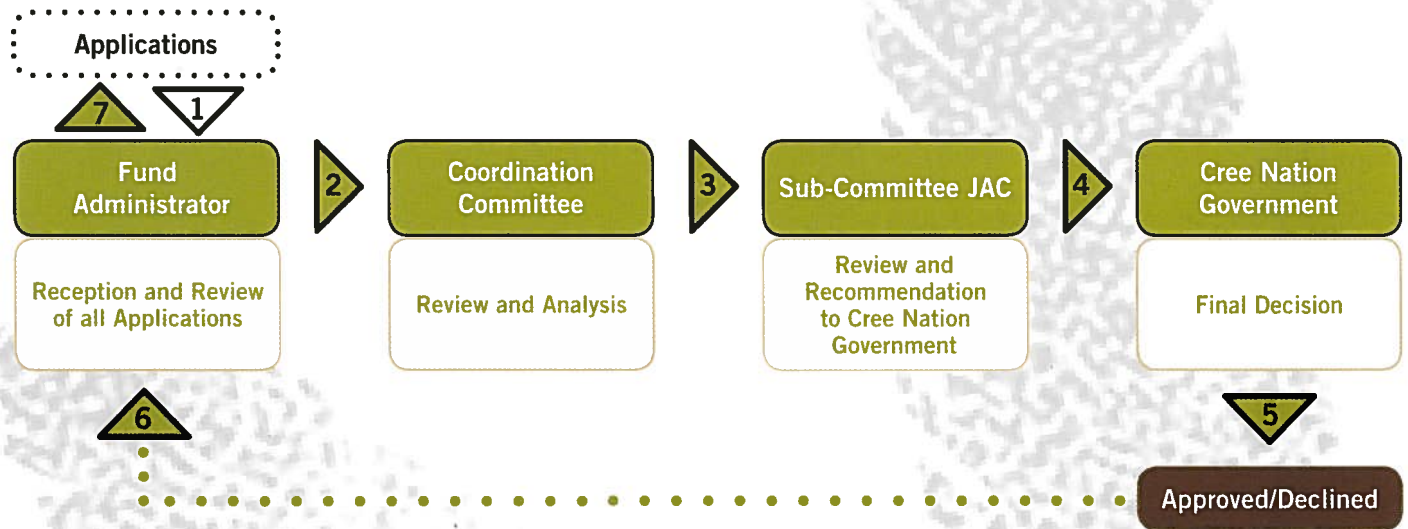

Projects must have a fixed duration and be non-recurrent (exceptionally, some may be multi-year). They must not duplicate existing projects, programs or services available for the same clientele.

These funds complement existing services and programs, funded by governments or other sources.

Application Process and Timeline

The application review and approval process is very thorough and meant to be fair and equitable among communities. The Fund Administrator will ensure applicant eligibility and completeness of the funding applications received, based on a set of criteria listed in his/her respective Fund Policy. All complete applications will then be forwarded in turn to the various committees involved in the review process and ultimately the Cree Nation Government will make a final decision on selected projects.

Below is a chart summarizing the application review and approval process:

Ongoing Monitoring

The Fund Administrator is the applicant's main point of contact during the application process, as it is for funding recipients throughout the year. The Fund Administrator monitors all projects regularly, and funding recipients are expected to provide quarterly reporting on the progress of their activities as well as financial reports.

The DOJCS reserves the right to audit and evaluate all projects during their implementation and after their completion.

I am interested in making a difference in my community. What do I need to do?

- 1 Review the four fund descriptions to choose the one most appropriate for your project.
- 2 For inclusion in the Project Funding Application Form, draft a general description of your project taking into account:
 - how the project supports the objectives of the fund;
 - the involvement of the community and/or a community justice committee;
 - the educational and awareness components of the project, as well as training and mentoring;
 - the anticipated results;
 - your criteria to measure what would constitute successful outcomes.
- 3 Visit the Department of Justice and Correctional Services' website at <http://creejusticefunds.ca> for all reference materials.
- 4 Download and complete the Project Funding Application Form for the fund you are interested in, prepare all required supporting documents and send your completed application by email to the Fund Administrator by the deadline.
- 5 Contact the Fund Administrator if you have any questions or require clarification.
